Sunday Whisky from Drug Stores. "The Sunday liquor law is being observed better now than it ever was before," said a policeman to a STAR reporter. "The best proof of it is the fact that so many of the drunken men arrested on Sunday have bottles of liquor labeled: 'Pure whisky, --- , druggist.' Drug store whisky usually costs more than orary saloon whisky, and the fact that common drunkards purchase the more costly liquor is pretty conclusive evidence that the saloons are closed or no one but regular customers are admitted on Sunday. It looks like a farce to close the saloon and let the drug stores do an open business and furnish liquor to all comers, in any quantities. After a while the saloon keepers will object to this mode of doing business, as they will claim that the law operates against them in favor of the drug stores.'

The Most Beautiful and Cleanest City. From the Chicago Staats-Zeitung. The strongest ground in favor of Washington is that it is undoubtedly the most beautiful and cleanest city in the country, and in contrast with New York and Chicago, who in the matter of uncleanliness and mud, compete with each other, Washington is of course to be preferred. Another reason is that a large number of Senators and Members own property there, and a great number of wealthy men from all parts of the United States also make the city of Washington their winter headquarthe city of Washington their winter headquar-ters. Another great hope for Washington con-sists in the expectation that the rivalry between New York and Chicago will result in that city slipping in between the two, as either of the two would prefer Washington if they are to lose it. One thing may as well be understood that the claims of Washington are not to be underestimated. They caunot be shrugged away as a great many Chicagoans are doing, but deserve to be carefully watched.

A Lady 78 Years Old Climbs the Monument and Dances a County Breakdown. "Well, I'm up here at last," he said, with s long breath, "but where's mother?" The speaker was a young man about thirty years old; the place was the lookout of the Washington monument. He had come in from Charles county, Md., with his seventy-eightyear-old mother to see the capital. They were on their way north, for the father and husband had been laid to his flual rest in "My Maryland," the farm had been rented and they were going back to the old home in the empire state. The aged lady, Mrs. M. J. Butts by name, though bowed with the weight of years had a heart as light as air and a step as nimble as that of childhood. She had "done" Washington that morning, and now having outwalked her son to the top of the monument, was looking down by the aid of the attendant's glass upon the magnificent distances she had traveled. Her airy, talkative disposition, together with the many years of her pilgrimage, drew to her the attention of all present, and made her the bright and only star of the oceasion. The numerous visitors were highly entertained by the ancient lady. But the climax was reached when, in response to a compliment of her mar-velous powers, she stated that she had learned the "Charles county breakdown" while living in Maryland, and without further solicitation than the applause of her hearers grasped her skirts in her hands and gave a two minutes' object lesson in a weird dance that would have aroused a soul so dead it had never painted a city red, and then with a pigeon-wing she bade all adieu and only her footsteps were heard as, followed by her son, she clambered down the stairs and departed for the land of her childhood, while leaving behind one that shall know her no more forever.

DEVELOPMENT OF CITIES. Washington, London, Paris and St. Petersburg.

Gath in the Cincinnati Inquirer. Nothing proceeds so crookedly and unexectedly as the development of cities. New York, for instance, expected to have all its power through its shipping, whereas at the present time its main source of growth and the next accessory source of strength is through

Some obstacles exist in the nature of the territory to extensive manufacturing at the city of Washington, but it is the opinion of those who have looked at this question closest that the future power of Washington is not to lie in trade, but

At the same time there is nothing about Washington so artificial in incentive or situation as to leave it high and dry, like St. Peters-burg, for example, which was the conception of an energetic tyrant to overawe his European

I found St. Petersburg last summer to be apparently duller than Washington city, though with a much larger population; yet I under-stand that the winter of St. Petersburg is the great factor of influence in the whole empire of Russia, with its population of 120,000,000. Hardly any of the real capitals of Europe contained anything to indicate their extensive growth at the outset but the political idea. Paris was merely a far inland and island stronghold upon which the crown of France and th parliament thereof soon settled and held fast. and the result has been a city of 2,500,000 of people.

Berlin was an after thought rather than an original choice for a capital, but the imperial tide of events has made it become a place of nearly one and a half million of people. Vienna took its prominence from having become the favorite city of the dynastic line of Roman German emperors and it is a place also of million of people. As nations find their out-lines and secure their routes of communication, the path-finder in the course of time becomes the capital finder; this has been demonstrated time and again by the founders of great external movements who have come to Washington to prosecute their equities and there have settled and died.

STANLEY AGAIN HEARD FROM. He Will Reach the Coast in January or February.

Mr. Mackinnon, the head of the Emin relief committee, has received a dispatch from Henry M. Stanley. The explorer says:

"I reached the Albert Nyanza from Banalaya for the third time in 140 days and found out that Emin and Jephson had both been prisoners since the 18th of August, 1888, being the day after I made the discovery that Bartelot's caravan had been wrecked. The troops in the equatorial province had revolted and shaken off all allegiance. Shortly after the mahdists invaded the province in full force. After the first battle in May the stations vielded and a panic struck the natives, who joined the invaders and assisted in the work of destruction.

"The invaders subsequently suffered reverses and dispatched a steamer to Khartoum for reinforcements. I found a letter waiting for me near the Albert Nyanza exposing the dangerous position of the survivors and urging the im-mediate necessity of my arrival before the end of December, otherwise it would be too late. I arrived there on the 18th of January for the third time. From the 14th of February to the 8th of May I waited for the fugitives and then left the Albert Nyanza, homeward bound. By the route taken I traversed the Semliki valley, the Owamba, the Usongora, the Toro, the Uhaiyana, the Unyampaka, the Antrori, the Karagive, the Uhaiya, the Wzinza, the South Victoria and the Nyanza. "Since we left Kabbarga we traveled along the base of the snow range Rugenzori. Three sides of the Southern Nyanza, or Nyanza of Jsongora, which is called now Albert Edward Nyanza, are about 900 feet higher than Albert Nyanza, having an exit at Semlik which re-ceives over fifty streams from the Rugenzori and finally enters the Albert Nyanza, making the Albert Edward the sourse of the southwest branch of the White Nile, the Victoria Nyanza being the source of the southeast branch.

Mr. Mackinnon says the committee has given orders that supplies for Stanley be hurried on to Mpwapwa and beyond there if possible. Stanley is expected to reach the coast in January or February.

PITTSBURG'S BENEFACTRESS. A Romantic Story of a Pretty and Rich Young American Girl.

Mrs. Mary E. Scheniey, nee Croghan, has given Pittsburg a tract of land worth $500,000. Later a reconciliation was effected with Col. Croghan, and when he died Mrs. Schenley inherited vast tracts of land in the heart of Pittsburg, comprising almost entire wards. This ground is not sold, but simply leased, and the vast income therefrom goes to England to enrich Mrs. Schenley and her daughters, several of whom have married into the nobility. The family have always resided in England. Capt. Schenley is long since dead.

ABOUT THE PLANETS. Some Interesting Events During the

Present Month. From the New York Times. The sun for November continues his southward course, although not with the same rapidity that he traveled in October.

The moon presents four phases during the month, being full on the 7th, last quarter on the 15th, new moon on the 22d, and first quarter on the 29th. On the 1st the moon was in the constellation of Capricornus and on the 30th it will be in Pisces. On the 8th there is conjunction with Neptune, on the 16th with Saturn, on the 18th with Mars, on the 20th with Uranus, on the 21st with Venus, on the 22d with Mercury, and on the 25th with Jupiter. Jupiter will continue alone in his glory as evening star until toward the close of month, when he will be joined by Neptune. He begins the month in the constellation of the Archer. On the 25th, three days after the new moon, the planet and the moon will be in conjunction, and, although not as close as last month, the cresent and the star will in cool, clear atmosphere of this season of the year present a celestial picture well worth see-ing. During the month Jupiter grows smaller, as his distance from the earth is still increas-

Venus, the queen of the morning stars, ranges under her banners all other planets with the exception of Jupiter. One by one they have succumbed to her superior attractions until her rival is left to shine alone in his glory. Venus rises about two hours before the Saturn attracts more than ordinary attention this month from the professional star gazers, as on the 1st, at 8 o'clock Greenwich time, there occurred a remarkable conjunction, that of Iapetus, its ontermost satelite, with another stability is first through the manufactures and satelite called Titan. These two, moving in different directions, passed within three sec-onds of each other. Shortly after this close approach Iapetus entered the shadow of the ring system, and, as Saturn was then near quadrature, the entire passage of the satelite through the shadow was clear of the planet as seen from the earth. The satelite's path traversed the shadow of the rings on both sides of the planet and the clear space between the planet and ring on one side. It was a matter of great interest and importance to note if the satelite shone out when crossing the projection of the Cassinian division, and if it was at all visible when in the shadow of the dusky ring or crape veil. This rare and interesting occurrence was much better observed in extreme latitudesabout Australia. Saturn itself is in conjunction with the moon on the 16th and in quadrature with the sun on the 25th. It is the in importance of the morning stars, and its size is gradually increasing as it gets nearer to us and approaches a convenient position for ob-

Mercury, another of the morning stars, ros about 5 o'clock on the 1st, and gets lazier as the cold weather increases, not appearing on the horizon on the 30th until about ten minutes before sunrise. Mercury, Mars, Uranus and Venus are to be found in the constellation of the Virgin.

Mars is a morning star, and one of the few whose size is increasing, as the planet is slowly approaching the earth. Mars will make his appearance earlier and earlier as the month advances, rising at its close at about 2:15 in the Uranus, also a morning star, meets both Mercury and Venus as he increases his distance rom the sun. He is in conjunction with the latter on the 9th, meeting the moon on the 20th. He rose on the 1st about 5 o'clock in the norning, and on the 30th will rise about two hours earlier.

Neptune, the last of the morning planets, continues to be ranked as one of that remarkable galaxy of brilliants only until the 25th of the month, when, being in opposition to the decked with flags and bunting from one end of sun, he leaves the fair queen of the morning skies to serve under Jupiter.

Of the constellations for November the Dipper is well placed for observation in the northern section of the heavens. In the southern portion we find the ruling constellation to be the Fishes, below which is the sea monster his grandchildren and great-grandchildren at Cetus. In the east the stars of Orion are rising. constellation Perseus. The Milky Way runs nearly vertically along the left of these constellations. All the original bird constellations are to be found in the west. The Lyre was one of these, being called the rising bird, while the Swan was called the falling bird. The divided portion of the Milky Way is now well seen in We have now entered upon the second chap-ter of this social federalism in that nearly all right and growing less so as it gets nearer the horizon.

It was signed after these instructions had been given. The secret journals of the Continental Congress have quite all been published in fragments. THE AGE OF ALUMINUM. If the Metal Can be Produced Cheaper it Will Revolutionize the World.

From the London Spectator. "The difficulty of producing it cheaply alone prevents aluminum from becoming the universal metal. That this is no fable may be easily realized if we stop to consider the intrinsic advantages of aluminum. To begin with it is present everywhere, and were the process of extraction easy not only no country but no district and even no parish would have to rely upon its neighbors for its supply of the prime necessary of industry and commerce. Iron can only be produced where nature has deposited lodes of a particular ore and the nation not possessed of this natural gift is forced to purchase it from without. Aluminum lies everywhere close at hand. In slate, in feldspar, in many kinds of rock and in ordinary clay it rests concealed, and hence, could only a simpler process of extraction than that now in use be devised, it might conceivably be as easy manufacture the metal as to make bricks and pottery. As in many parts of the country the earth that is dug out of the foundations supplies a great portion of the bricks required to build the house, so aluminum might be produced on the very spot where it was required.

"Bearing in mind these qualities and imagining aluminum to be used where iron is now employed, it is obvious that many of the great problems of mechanics when applied to in-dustry would be solved. Take the case of speed in ocean navigation. At present one of the great difficulties is the weight of the vessels. It is practically impossible to get engine power sufficient to obtain more than 20 miles an hour. Suppose, however, the weight of the material out of which ships are constructed re-duced by one-half and their sides coated with a highly polished, non-corrosive substance. Under such circumstances there can be doubt that the vantage in favor of land transport as regards speed would be done away with and we should think nothing of vessels crossing the Atlantic in seventy-two hours. A swift passenger ship, built of material offering as little resistance to the waves as glass and lighter and more buoyant, might easily accomplish 50 miles an hour. Then, too, ships drawing only the same amount of water as at present might accommodate a great deal more cargo, while large and commodious vessels would require far less depth of water to float them than at present. In inland navigation this would be of the utmost importance. It is calculated that a ship which if entirely constructed of iron would draw 26 feet of water, would, when made of aluminum, not draw more than four or five. Practically, then, the light metal would treble or quadruple the number of miles of navigable river in the world.

"Whether those who are now endeavoring to make aluminum the metallic staple will in the end succeed, or whether the search for the metal of the future will prove as fruitless as that for the philosopher's stone, remains to be seen. Possibly some accident may bring about the usurpation of aluminium in a very few years; but, equally possible, further research may show that it must remain physically impossible to produce it except at great cost and labor. We are in the habit of saying that in the end science conquers all difficulties, but this is by no means really the case. We hear most of those it overcomes; but, as a matter of fact, there are as many defeats as victories. Still, there is some chance that the secret may be discovered and the ideal metal be yet forth coming.

Fort Sumter Again Bombarded.

Charleston's great earthquake festival opened resterday with cloudless skies and charming weather. The public buildings, private residences and commercial houses were bethe city to the other. A hundred thousand United States flags were displayed and not a confederate flag was in sight. King street at night presented a fairy picture, with its triarches, illumined show windows, umphal swinging Chinese lanterns, gay throngs of sight-seers, bands of music, and military pa-There was a grand pyrotechnic display on lonial lake, with a mimic attack of the federal fleet on Fort Sumter.

The catarrh was very disagreeable, especially in the winter causing constant discharge from my nose, ringing noises in my ears, and pains in the back of my head. The effort to clear my head in the morning by hawking and spitting was painful. Hood's Sarsaparilla gave me relief immediately, while in time I was entirely cured.
